THE HOME RULE BILL. Recognized to Be Much Better for Ire- The Government to Occupy the Atland Than That of 1886.

From the New York Times. The home rule bill was introduced in the house of commons February 13 by Mr. government the whole time of the house Gladstone in perhaps the greatest speech for the remainder of the session, to susthat the "Grand Old Man" has ever made pend the 12 o'clock rule, and to appoint in all his sixty years of parliamentary ser- Saturday sittings. vice. The interest of the day centered not so much in the provisions of the bill, for in announced that the government only hoped the seven years since the introduction of to be able to deal with the employers' liathe bill of 1886 the English people had be- bility and parish councils bills at the come accustomed to the idea of home rule autumn session. He said he would not for Ireland, but in the fact that a man of deny that the solution was a stringent one, eighty-four was to stand and make a speech | but the cause was of urgent necessity.

The bill which he outlined was recognized Irish landlords; in the new bill there was no hint of a penny for such a purpose. Then there was a fantastic plan of a big upper house with two orders, the Irish peers play-ing a dominant part; in the new bill there was a compact senate of only forty-eight, all elective, and peers dropped out without a word of mention. The lower house, too, was cut down from an unwieldy body to 103, or twenty-five less than the New York

The object of the bill remained, as in 1886, to establish a legislative body in Dublin for the conduct of both legislation and administration in Irish as distinct from imministration in Irish as distinct from imperial affairs. The bill, in detail, provides for a legislature for Ireland, consisting of the queen and of two houses—the legislative council and the legislative assembly. This legislature, with certain restrictions, is authorized to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Ireland in respect to matters exclusively relating to Ireland or some part thereof. The bill says that the powers of the Irish legislature that the powers of the Irish legislature shall not extend to the making of any law respecting the establishment or endowment religion or prohibiting the free exercise ereof, or imposing any disability or conferring any privilege on account of relig-ious belief, or whereby any person may be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law or whereby private property may be taken without just com-

According to the bill the executive power in Ireland shall continue vested in her majesty the queen, and the lord lieu-tenant, on behalf of her majesty, shall exors shall retire in every fourth year and their seats be filled by a new election. The legislative assembly is to consist of 103 members returned by the parliamentary constituencies existing at present in Ireland. This assembly, unless sooner dissolved, may exist for five years. The bill also provides for eighty Irish members in the house of commons.

In regard to finance, the bill provides that for the purposes of this act the public revenue shall be divided into general revecommissioners of woods, an annual sum for the customs and excise duties collected in Great Britain on articles consumed in Ireland, provided that an annual sum of the customs and excise duties collected in Ireland on articles consumed in Great Britain shall be deducted from the revenue collected in Ireland and treated as revenue collected in Great Britain; these sums to be determined by a committee ap pointed jointly by the Irish government and the imperial treasury. > The legislature, in order to meet expenses The legislature, in order to meet expenses of the public service, is authorized to impose taxes other than those now existing in Ireland. Ireland should also have charged up against her and be compelled to pay out of her own treasury all salaries and pensions of judges and liabilities of all kinds which Great Britain has assumed for her benefit of the little transport of the salaries and pensions. for her benefit. The bill further provides that appeal from courts in Ireland to the house of lords shall cease and that all persons having the right of appeal shall have a like right to appeal to the queen in council.

The term of office of the lord lieutenant is fixed at six years. Ultimately the royal Irish constabulary shall cease to exist and no force other than the ordinary civil police shall be permitted to be formed. The Irish legislature shall be summoned to meet on the first Tuesday in September, 1894, and the first election for members shall be held at such time before that day as may be fixed by her majesty in council. feating it by obstruction. HOME RULE IN THE LORDS.

An Overwhelming Vote to Be Cast There will be no dallying with home rule when the Irish local government bill is taken up in the house of lords.

The Marquis of Salisbury has planned to make the decisive division on the bill the occasion of a great tory rally. Not content with the normal majority of the lords against the government, he will insist that every tory peer who can be reached by the whip shall be present to record his opposition to the Gladstonian policy. The prospect is that, despite the unfavorableness of the season, almost the full strength of the opposition will be brought out for the vote. More than four hundred lords have already promised to support the Marquis of Salisbury in throwing out the bill. The Earl of Kimberly, leader of the govern-ment's forlorn hope in the house of lords, can muster at most forty-two votes. For every peer supporting the bill, therefore, there will be ten opposing it.

Not all unionists look with favor on the Salisbury plan of rallying an overwhelming majority of lords to vote against the bill. Such a course, they feel, must direct general attention to the broadening chasm between the lords and the commons and tend to precipitate the fight of the British democracy against the upper house. Port Royal Not Badly Damaged. A dispatch from Port Royal, S. C., says: It is currently reported that during the hurricane of August 27 many lives were lost in Port Royal and that almost the entire town was swept away. In view of these statements I deem it proper to announce the facts. There was not a single life lost or person injured by the storm. Business houses and residences were not damaged to an amount exceeding $5,000. While Port Royal does not solicit or need aid, the ad-Jacent sea islands are a scene of death and desolation, which strongly appeals to every

First-class teachers, bright and cheerful rooms.
This is a day of sharp competition and you cannot hope for success unless you thoroughly prepare.
No better opportunity for this preparation can be found than we offer you.

Our diplomas are recognized at home, in counting houses, banks and in all branches of business, as a guarantee of fitness. We are not dependent upon the Chicago Exposition for indorsement.

Our testimonials are the superior work of our graduates and the cheerful and hearty support of our patrons. nu5-3m Resident Principal.
